NEW LEGEND OF INVINCIBILITY

It is extremely important if the "great battle of the west" has started, as French spokesmen are reported to believe.

In the months since its sensational conquest of Poland, possessor of one of Europe's theoretically strong armies, Nazi Germany has built a new legend of invincibility with its exploits. It has been more than a match for every opponent.

Perhaps the legend is no more terrifying in its effect on morale than the similar legend which grew up in the early part of the World war; that is a moot question. It must be remembered that in war the aggressor inevitably makes the better impression, just as the boxer who leads the fight seems to outclass a slow but rugged opponent. If the boxer lands his Sunday punch soon enough, moreover, his superiority is a matter of record.

The hope of preventing the imposition of Germany's will has resided from the outset on two things, the British navy and the French army. Each is generally conceded to be the best in the business. While Germany's superior air force has obfuscated the naval issue in the Scandinavian episode and may have a similar effect on the land issue, the French army still has not had a chance to demonstrate its prowess.

As numerous observers have explained, the importance of the invasion of Belgium and the Netherlands lies in Germany's gamble on the ability of its army to bring to a speedy conclusion what has been started in the west. A stalemate would be disastrous for the German program. A defeat for Germany in the low countries might end in the war as quickly as the Germans obviously hope to be able to end it there by victory.

Perhaps the new legend of invincibility is of less consequence on the scene than it is from a distance. All observers must cherish that hope. It has become the only escape from a spreading conviction that Germany, unless stopped, has within its grasp the power to do in 1940 what it narrowly failed to do in 1914—gain military supremacy before its opponents are able to resolve the fighting into the kind of war they are able to win.

ISOLATION ABANDONS U. S.

Precautionary measures by the Allies to protect Holland's possessions in the Caribbean, following closely similar measures to protect Iceland following invasion of Denmark, should tell Americans all they need to know about collapse of peaceful isolation. There isn't any such animal. A hermit dodging aerial bombs is neither peaceful nor an isolationist.

In the large scale revolution being carried forward by the aggressor nations, one part of the earth's surface is no more sacred than any other part. The tag ends of earth are just as vulnerable as the great powers. The Dutch East Indies, source of much of the Netherlands' wealth, lie temptingly close to Japan. Alaska is temptingly close to Russia. The Philippine Islands are in the sphere of the rising sun. Dozens of strategically situated islands are scattered about the earth's surface, all potentially useful as air bases. With the collapse of collective security, which it is Germany's evident aim to produce, there would be a mad scramble for everything that could be seized without too great an effort. The aggressor nations have made their intentions plain with seizures of territory which, it is now plain, merely marked the prelude to the greater revolution they hope to create.

The United States has obvious interest in what happens to territory vital to its interests. It cannot permit any foreign power to jeopardize its hemispheric security; South American governments already are expressing concern over their vulnerability under a rule of violence. They have no friend but the United States, and some of them doubt the United States. Events of the last eight months have made plain that in the face of the revolution being carried forth simultaneously by Germany, Japan, Russia and perhaps Italy, with the common objective of seizing whatever can be seized, there is no right of possession except that which can be enforced.

The United States has not abandoned peaceful isolation. Peaceful isolation has abandoned it.

THE UNIFORM ITCH

Remember technocracy? Remember Howard Scott, who devised the technocratic formula for saving the United States?

Scott likes gray suits—has worn 'em for years. The other day he announced that in the future he'd be obliged if all other technocrats would wear gray suits, too. Nothing compulsory, but gray henceforth would be the technocratic color.

Apparently the itch to put the human race in uniforms is universal, like the common cold. But Mr. Scott will be lucky if he can beat out the blue serge society for first place. Gray shows spots so easily.

RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED

Sudden admission of what seems to amount to helplessness in the face of potential threats of aggression leave the United States public aghast.

Either the military men who are openly confessing deficiency in national defense have lost their heads over war news from abroad or haven't been using them.

Their job is to generate confidence in national security by maintenance of an adequate defense. If they have been caught asleep at the switch, heads should roll. If, on the other hand, they are representing things to be worse than they are for some ulterior purpose, they should remember that popular confidence is a hard thing to reestablish, once it has been wrecked.

A looming emergency in national defense is no time to bicker over who was caught napping. Nevertheless, an American taxpayer respectfully submits it is hard to understand why a defense budget that has been in the neighborhood of a billion a year for the last three years should have produced nothing but an apparent state of panic in the minds of professional defenders by 1940. Whatever needs to be done to repair the country's shortcomings must be done without delay. If it includes overcoming the "lag" which is the traditional shortcoming of the military mind, that should be overcome without delay too.

THE STARS SAY:

For Thursday, May 16

UNUSUAL and surprising activity may be looked for on this day, judging by the lunar and mutual aspects of inciting planets. There may be a very surprising turn of events, with much transpiring which may have a radical and far-reaching influence on the future life and fortunes. Much depends upon making a wise and benefic choice under this critical but progressive urge. The energies, abilities and emotions as well as under creative and dynamic stimuli. Important new projects, or extremely progressive programs, with the element of the novel, revolutionary or idealistic, are under thrilling insistence. Romance and adventure are in the air and youth must have its fling.

Those whose birthday it is are on the brink of a year of most thrilling and romantic adventure, with all things of a new, novel, unique or revolutionary cast being assured of probably spectacular fulfillment. Youth, modernism and audacity, whether in science, invention, wild forms of creative expression or emotional thrills, seem to clamor for attention or spectacular achievement. But there are some obstacles and opposition of the mighty to vanquish with trepidity and persistence. All progressive and speculative attempts seem to thrive.

A child born on this day should be richly endowed with talents of a rare order, with intellectual, literary, scientific, inventive and creative skill to assure it renown or public acclaim in any number of novel achievements or adventures. Audacious, progressive and romantic, it may have little co-operation from those in high places financially.

Coffee Is Like Lubricant,
Oiling Jaded Mentalities

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE IMAM of Shehohet Monastery decided to make a drink out of some berries that had been found growing on a bush on a nearby hillside. The berries were hard and black and, though crushed with a spoon, he could not dissolve them in cold water. But on heating them in a chafing dish over the embers on his hearth, they sweated and dried, and darkened, so that when he crushed them in a mortar and poured boiling water on them, he made a dark brew with a pleasant and stimulating aroma.

He poured himself a beaker of the steaming decoction, which had a bitter, woodenish taste, but created a soothing glow over his mind and body. He lay down and composed himself for sleep, but sleep did not come. Instead, a state of delicious mental activity, almost like an intoxication, ensued. The Imam, being a fervent Moslem, had had no experience with drunkenness and was afraid he had committed a mortal sin. He felt a quickened beating of his heart and he had a sense of lightness and power in his limbs. He took another beaker of the beverage and stayed awake all night. His mind was active, cheerful and alert. His thoughts were as if they were living animals. He finally fell into a light sleep and awoke refreshed.

First Coffee-Drinker
This, according to tradition, is the first human experience with coffee. It has been a companion of human beings ever since. Introduced into Europe in the seventeenth century, it drove out alcoholic beverages. It had popular appeal and coffee houses were established where the beverage was taken incessantly. Some of the modern coffee-drinkers who acquire a reputation for consuming 30 cups a day would have been considered amateurs in those days.

The effects which the ancient Imam noticed are still the ones which make it popular—a sense of lively intellectualization, relief of fatigue, increased muscular tone and strength of the heart beat.

Naturally, any beverage which gives as much human happiness as coffee will soon be regarded by the puritanical element in the population as being harmful. The puritans do not want any human being to have a good time, and any artificial means to that end is immediately suspect.

Difficult to Prove
When it comes to coffee, however, they have a hard time to prove their point. Of course, the excessive use of any medication is more or less harmful, but caffeine probably never causes anything but functional changes—no permanent tissue damage, no matter in what quantity it is taken.

A prominent writer on the effects of drugs says, "It is important to remember that caffeine has no effect on brain protoplasm except to increase its functional activity. Caffeine does not produce brain exhaustion unless it is taken in such a manner and in such large quantities as to interfere with sleep, rest and the taking of food in ordinary quantities. It has been shown that an individual is enabled to do more mental work in a given space of time with caffeine than he is capable of doing without it, and that this increased work is not followed by depression or exhaustion. In other words, it acts as a lubricant does in machinery, increasing ability without causing exhaustion."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. M.: "I am writing you for advice as to how I may gain in weight. Am in the late teens and in normal health but I can't seem to bring my weight much above 100 pounds."

Answer: The assumption that a thin person is in normal health is quite a large one. The first part of a program for gaining weight is to have a complete examination so as to rule out tuberculosis, diabetes and other diseases which cause emaciation. Unquestionably thin people eat less and have less desire to eat than they should. Physicians of my acquaintance who are themselves thin, and who have studied the question admit this, and say they haven't the interest in eating that an overweight person has. Of course, this can be forced. An appe-

ANOTHER PASCO IS MIBS CHAMP

Nephew of Former City Champ Cops Title at Columbia

The name Pasco returned to prominence in Salem marbledom today as 12-year-old Don Pasco captured the championship of Columbia school in The Salem News' fourth annual marble tournament.

The Columbia school champion is a nephew of Bob Pasco, who held the city championship for two years in a row before reaching the age limit of 15 years. Bob won the first annual city mibs tournament in 1937 and repeated as champion in 1938. The present city champion is Dale Shaffer of Fourth Street school.

Victory in the Columbia finals today gave Don Pasco his school marble championship for the second time. Don won the Columbia title for the first time in 1938, but lost his championship last year to Joseph LaMonica.

His return to championship form this year enabled him to shoot his way through the Columbia finals without losing a match. He defeated John Valente of the fifth grade, 7-5; Don Ritchie of the Fourth grade, 7-1; Courtland Johnson of the third grade, 7-0; Angelo Volio of the second grade, 7-6; and Bobby Theiss of the first grade, 7-0.

Pasco, a sixth grade student, came near losing to Volio, a second grader, who showed great promise as a future marble star. Volio gained an early lead in their match, but Pasco came from behind to tie the score at 6-6.

Volio Is Weak

Volio received first crack at the deciding marble, but his shot was weak and the "doke" stopped a few inches short of rolling out of the ring. Pasco's shot was true, sending the deciding marble out of the circle and giving him the match.

Pasco, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Pasco of 519 Franklin st., is the third school champion to be named in The News' tournament.

Other champions named earlier this month are Rudolph Ciotli of St. Paul's school and Dominick Parlow of Prospect school.

The seven champions of Salem grade schools and Junior High will meet late this month in the city finals to determine who will represent Salem in the district matches at Canton.

Flashes From War Fronts

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN, May 15.—Asked how soon a great air offensive would start against England, authorized Nazi sources answered today: "Whenever we are completely ready—at exactly the right moment—when it is most uncomfortable for England."

POTSDAM, Germany, May 15.—Worries of the Hohenzollern family over the 81-year-old head of the dynasty, former Kaiser Wilhelm, were relieved partly today by a laconic telegram from Gen. Wilhelm Dommes, chief of the Hohenzollern administration, which said: "Goal reached. All is well."

The telegram was filed in Emmenich, border station for trains going to Holland from Köln and south Germany generally. It was thus not clear whether the Kaiser still was at Doorn, his home in exile in the Netherlands.

SUSAK, Yugoslavia, May 15.—Crowds of Italians shouting "Down with Yugoslavia!" stoned Yugoslav homes and business offices today at Fiume, Italy, across the border from Susak.

LONDON, May 15.—A Belgian radio announcement heard in London today said that the Belgian government was staying in Brussels and that Allied embassies also were remaining.

Elkrun Pair Wed Fifty-two Years

LISBON, May 15.—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Davis, well known residents of Elkrun township, quietly observed their 52nd wedding anniversary today at the home of their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Finney, east of Elkrun.

The couple, who received the congratulations of friends, were married in Lisbon May 15, 1883, by Rev. H. W. Kellogg, pastor of the Methodist church, and their entire married life has been spent in Elkrun township, where Mr. Davis has been a prominent farmer. Mr. Davis, who is 77 years old, was born in England, while his bride of 52 years was born in Fairfield township Sept. 22, 1867, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seth Tullis.

The anniversary will be celebrated with a family dinner Sunday in the home of their other daughter, Mrs. Raymond Montgomery, at Elkrun, at which time they will be at home to friends from 2 until 4 p. m.

In addition to the two daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Davis have four grandchildren and one great grandchild.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 10¢ and 25¢. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

I wish to express my thanks and appreciation to all those who supported me in the primaries.

The CAIRO GARTER MURDERS

By VAN DYCK MASON

CHAPTER XXVI

"I'm going to tell you something, Hugh. By the way, I'm calling you Hugh" just to pique that Black fellow. Moira continued.

"Has Miss Black been invited on this so interesting cruise?"

"Yes," Moira said in a matter-of-fact tone, "but she's not coming and you know it. Oh, I won't look deep and mysterious—Stagg told me, of course, how she was killed in an auto accident last night. Well, 'tis no great loss," she continued so calmly that North was left breathless. "But as I was going to say, well—I suppose I shouldn't tell you, but I'm going to—I have a connection with the Anglo-Egyptian police."

"You have!" Nothing if not convincing was North's exclamation, and he smiled softly.

"And now you.... you will help me?" A sudden uprush of eagerness invaded her manner. "You won't and Clive—er—the government—unfortunate! I can promise you that whatever you stand to lose by cooperation with me will be amply repaid. Are you game, Captain?"

His deliberation lasted a good two minutes. "I'm game, but I doubt if Messrs. Heinemann and Schlager would be so sporting."

"Why? They'd make just as much."

"So you say. No, on their account I'd have to have some sort of a guarantee covering the sum they expect to clear from the shipment. I have dealt with governments before, my dear. Their memory can be lumped with the gratitude of kings."

Moira made a quick impatient gesture. "Oh, you stupid! It isn't only the government I'm talking about. Tell me, would any certified cheque made out to cash satisfy you?"

He lost her eyes and her reaction momentarily defied his analysis. "I suppose so. But who is this other source of revenue?"

"That I can't tell you," the girl cried softly, "but I think we can get the man I'm after to pay you a huge sum of money." She looked up at him, a challenge on her bright, impetuous mouth. "How about it?"

"You suggest a very pleasing transaction," North smiled, settling back in his chair.

"Good. Then that is settled." Moira bent forward until a strand of soft hair brushed his cheek.

"Here is what you are to do. When someone, whom you already know, approaches you about these munitions your firm has on the high seas, you will throw in with him. Sell him your entire shipment," she urged an inscrutable, half-mocking crease plucking at her mouth corners. "Will you do this?"

"I don't know, Moira; all this sounds pretty risky."

"Please! Please, Hugh! I'd do almost anything to win your help."

"Well, maybe I'll do as you ask but first I've got to see a certified cheque to cover my canceled contracts, plus the price of the rest of the cargo, plus something as interest."

"Ah, I mglad you asked for that last, Hugh. Real salesmen have a weakness for extra commissions. Until now I haven't been too sure that you are really what you say you are."

They finished their drinks, then in replacing her glass Moira cast him a slow look. "I'll have that cheque for you after dinner. How much should it be for?"

"One hundred thousand pounds," North said without turning a hair. "Or half a million dollars if you prefer. Half in advance and half on receipt of goods."

She blinked. "You're a hard bargainer, Captain. Well, so be it. I'm thinking you won't be sorry. Now, remember what I've said. You're to—"

"She got no further because someone had paused at the door and tapped. It proved to be a small Negro boy in a cloth-of-gold turban."

"Monsieur Phillpides presents his compliments. If the lady and the gentleman have quite finished their conference, will they kindly come on deck for cocktails?"

The thought that in all probability their recent conversation had been overheard left the two staring blankly into each other's faces, and slowly a measure of the color departed from Moira McLeod's cheeks. For once her self-assurance seemed shaken and, with fingertips convulsively pressed to her lips, she looked a badly frightened young woman.

"Don't get scared before you're hurt," he advised. "First chance I get I'll take a look for a dictaphone. Nothing of the sort may have been installed. Most likely someone merely saw you drop in here. Besides we've been talking in undertones."

Rallying, she summoned one of her flashing smiles ere she whispered very softly, "I'll have the cheque for you after dinner."

"Thanks," North said, wondering whose signature would appear upon it.

Banishing all further speculation on the subject, he sought the afterdeck. He discovered M. Phillpides, surrounded by a number of distinguished-looking guests, placidly sipping a cocktail.

"Do try some of this, Captain," he invited waving toward a huge bowl of caviar cradled in a block of ice.

Several smartly gowned young Egyptian women, golden of complexion, made the afterdeck ring with their deep-toned laughter.

North immediately recognized Dr. and Mrs. Ladd by the port rail, quietly drinking tea and admiring the river banks which were beginning to slip by more rapidly. There also was Lolita chatting to a dark, intense young man who had "Welshman" written over him from head to foot.

Moira was nowhere to be seen but Hasid Pasha, wearing a brilliant scarlet fez, was the center of a bevy of young women. M. Phillpides devoted himself with a great attention to a Frenchman who for all the world resembled a white fox with his pallid pointed face, short gray hair and fierce light gray whiskers. The first person to see North was Lolita Ladd who immediately came hurrying over to thrust an arm through his.

"Oh, Captain North, isn't this simply grand? I've been looking forward so much to seeing you again. Almost as much as Dairdre—yes, she's aboard—is to seeing an Englishman she met on the Fort Lucknow. A Major somebody—Callaghan? Kilpatrick? Oh, bother, I can't remember."

"Englishman?" North queried. Lolita snapped her fingers and flashed a wide white smile. "There! I've remembered. The name was Kilgour. I saw him yesterday," she added.

It was hard for Hugh North to maintain a pose of casual interest. "Oh, really?" he said. "At the Restaurant des Pyramides or Shepherd's?"

"Oh no. It was in town early yesterday, Thursday that is. I went in to Cairo to buy supplies for mother. He was riding in a car."

"Which way was he going?"

"Down river," Lolita replied carelessly. "He was with a big tough-looking man."

"An Egyptian?"

"No. It's funny, but I'd almost swear he was an American. Major Kilgour was a bit tight hat, though. He only nodded when I waved. He looked worried."

"Did you notice anything else about Kilgour's companion—or the car he was in?"

She cast him a surprised look. "No, I had only a glimpse. Why the interest?"

"Just idle curiosity. I hardly know your British military friend."

Then you're missing something, Major Kilgour's perfectly grand. Dairdre is simply cra-azy over him! Only you're much nicer even if she won't admit it."

"What made you think the other man hard-looking?"

"Why, his nose was a little twisted—you know like a football player's and the top of his left ear looked as if it had been hurt."

North took a deep gulp of his highball. So? And it was after this that Stagg Melborne had driven him into the desert.

"Ah, Captain, such a pleasant surprise?" Mrs. Ladd's greeting was graciousness itself. "You have been so charming to my stepdaughter, I can hardly thank you enough."

She went on when Lolita was captured by a stalwart young Frenchman and led off to a little dance floor built upon the dabbah's afterdeck.

A breeze blowing down the Nile ruffled the water and blew aside a jet curl arranged low over Mrs. Ladd's forehead, briefly exposing a small design resembling a five-branched candlestick tattooed just below the apex of her "widows peak." To his astonishment the effect of the ultramarine lines against the extraordinary whiteness of her skin was pleasing rather than grotesque.

"I see you have noticed?" She smiled, not at all annoyed by his startled expression.

"Yes, I can't help wondering about it," he confessed.

"It is a relic of a romantic childhood," she explained in her vigorous, deep-pitched voice. "You see, Captain, when I was only four I was stolen by some Kurdish raiders of my father's mission in Syria. The tribesmen took me back to the mountains, and Papa, being only a poor Welsh missionary, couldn't even begin to raise the ransom they asked. The Turks did nothing to rescue me, so the Kurds made a Mohammedan of me—that was when I got this tattooing—and prepared me some day to be sold into a zenana. But fortunately, before that could happen, the war came and a British expedition rescued me. Voila tout."

North looked his interest. "It must be a great help to your husband to have you so familiar with Oriental languages."

"I do what I can," Zara Ladd murmured. "It is not a great deal. You must visit the college next week! Lolita and my friend, Miss McLeod, will be there."

"Miss McLeod?"

"Yes, Moira McLeod. She is an old friend—so amusing."

"Well, Mrs. Ladd, I'll see if I can't manage it," North promised with a smile.

Breezy Briefs Of Sport From Brietz To You

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, May 15.—Frankie Frisch figures if he could get Mickey Owen from the Cards, the Pirates might finish in the first division. Otherwise, he's about reconciled to wallowing in or around the cellar.... The first organized cheering section in the history of American golf swings into action tomorrow. Pupils of Paul Runyan's special golf courses at Columbia U. will go out to the Goodall round robin in a body to try to root teacher home.... The Joe Gould-Mike Jacobs law suit may be settled any hour. The two are huddling daily at 9 a. m. (An ungodly hour for the light mob) to escape publicity.

Identified In reporting the American league batting averages, the esteemed Cincinnati Enquirer says: "...and Ken Keltner, Cleveland third sacker, with a mark of $3.73."

Arthur Mann, the old baseball writer, is the new head guy on the sports quiz program and putting a little pep into it.... Henry Thomas, leading trotting horse trainer, is offering to bet Greyhound doesn't do the mile in 2:00 this season—with plenty of takers.... Every time Tex Carleton has gone out to pitch this year, the other four Texans on the Dodger roster—Mancuso, Koy, Hudson and Gene Moore—have sung "The Eyes of Texas Are Upon You," as he left the clubhouse.

Today's Guest Star Chilly Doyle, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph: "The situation with the Pirates is similar to the one in Holland.... Everytime they get a leak plugged another one pops out." Jo Jo Moore, the gaunt Texan, is sparking the Giant drive. He hit 500 in seven games and was on base 25 times.... We saw the Pirates and you and Frisch can have 'em.... Gene Sarazen likes Jimmy Delmar in the Goodall, but Byron Nelson is our choice.... At least seven American league managers will tell you they're having the most enjoyable season of their careers.

We're Asking You Whoever would have thought two months ago that on May 14 the Phillies and Cardinals would be battling for fifth place in the National league—with the Phils winning?

Afterthought Anyway, the Buccaneers are making the Phillies look pretty good.

Death Valley in 1892 is the setting for the western action drama

"20 Mule Team," starring Wallace Beery, which shows at the State theater Thursday through Saturday.

Concerning the adventures of a borax mule team skinner, played by Beery; a saloon owner named Josie, played by Marjorie Rambeau; her daughter, played by Ann Baxter, and her sweetheart, played by Beery's nephew, Noah Beery, Jr., the picture packs enough action to satisfy the most exacting western fan.

When Bill, the mule skinner, finds that the company has postponed payday, he joins forces with a crafty pal of other days to hunt for the mother lode and beat his own company to the claim. The young people complicate matters by finding the claim and incurring the enmity of the skinner's friend.

As usual, Beery straightens matters out to everyone's satisfaction.

Don't Pet Too Much. Co-eds Are Advised

BOSTON—Simmons College students have been told that the time to pet is after marriage not before.

Prof. Alexander MacLean of Massachusetts Institute of Technology spoke at the girls school and urged them not to pet too much.

"Think of it," he said, "you have all your life to pet after marriage and you probably will be married 45 years. That's when you should pet."

YOU CAN TELL CAMEL CIGARETTES ARE SLOWER-BURNING. THEY'RE Milder AND COOLER

THAT SLOWER WAY OF BURNING MEANS EXTRA SMOKING, TOO. CAMELS ARE THE BEST BUY

SCIENTIFIC tests have confirmed it, but you can tell just by smoking Camels that they are slower-burning. You'll find Camels free from the excess heat and irritating qualities of too-fast burning...extra mild and extra cool. You'll find a full, rich flavor that only Camel's matchless blend and slower way of burning can give. And on top of the extra pleasure, you'll find Camels also give extra smoking (see right).

In recent laboratory tests, CAMELS burned 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them. That means, on the average, a smoking plus equal to
